A sandwich shop at the seaside, that was the place I first met you.

We enjoyed talking in unfamiliar English to the best of our abilities.

The next morning, When I saw you at the school, my heartbeat was so loud, like it was beating into my ears.

I believed I met my destiny. So from that day, I waited for you after school every day, every day, every single day.

It was our first experience in foreign country, we were strangers but we laughed a lot, didn't we ?

We walked around the town like a maze, everywhere, seeing cafes, pubs, cinema theater, and museums.

I am still in so much love with the time when we spent together from time we spent together.

As usual, when you were eating a shrimp sandwich, you muttered how delicious it was, looking very satisfied.

So I wrote my feelings for you on the beach instead of telling you, but at the moment, waves came and washed away everything from our feet quietly.

The afternoon you left, the sea left me alone tremendously.

So I looked up at the sky and asked if I could see you again every day, every day, every single day.
